Dates Set For Entertainment Festival

Plans for the Addison Entertainment Festival are going rapidly forward, a committee having met this week to select the dates for the three entertainments. The Addison Entertainment Festival is being sponsored by Addison citizens for the purpose of securing funds to purchase uniforms for the Addison High School band.

Three programs of entertainment will be presented to audiences in the school auditorium during the three winter months. These programs will fully measure up to the standards of the many Chautauquas which have visited Addison in the past, and will furnish even keener enjoyment as Addison people will be the entertainers, with the exception of one or two numbers to be furnished by visiting artists. The course of entertainment will include a program of orchestra and mixed chorus, a play and a full band concert. Season tickets for the three big evenings will soon be offered local people. Judged by the response heard after this series of entertainments was announced, the people of this community will get behind the movement, almost to a family.

The dates selected for the festival are: January 30, Orchestra and mixed chorus; February 27, Play; March 21, Band Concert.

Park Name Familiar In Lumber Trade

J. Stratton Park, President of Lumber and Supply Firm, Descended From Long Line of Lumbermen —Grandfather Supplied Logs For Libby Prison.

(Deferred From Last Week's Issue)

The J. S. Park Lumber and Supply Co., organized October 6, 1931, is a young, progressive concern which has made successful strides ahead despite the generally existing depression of the past four years. The firm specializes in lumber, millwork and builders' supplies, including builders' hardware, paints, wallpaper, glass and everything pertaining to general building construction. General contracting is also an important feature of the firm's business.

J. Stratton Park, president of the company, is descended from a long line of lumbermen who have been active in lumber and building operations over several generations. His great-grandfather, Elijah Park, was a pioneer lumberman who settled in Woodhull when the region was new. Southern Steuben county rapidly developed into one of the outstanding lumbering regions of the nation and Elijah Park was in the forefront of lumbering operations as they were carried on at the time. It was the practice then to cut logs from the surrounding hills, bring them to the Canisteo river and then, in the spring of the year, when seasonal freshets came, they would be released and carried by the water via the Chemung and Susquehanna rivers to tidewater. One fact worthy of historical mention is that the timbers from which Libby prison was constructed were purchased from Elijah Park who took the lumber from the Norway Ridge section of the town of Woodhull.

James H. Park, son of Elijah Park, spent the early part of his life in lumbering operations in the town of Woodhull. Later in 1866 he came to Addison, and resided in the house on Front street, now owned by Charles F. Park. This house was built close to a hundred years ago and is said to have been constructed by Edward Farnham, a brother of Colonel Farnham. Eventually James Park became interested in the manufacturing lines and became president of Park, Winton and True, which succeeded McKay and Hill, and C. D. Hill & Co., in ownership and management of the lumber and millwork plant on South street, Addison.

Charles F. Park, son of James H., was connected with the manufacturing business approximately forty years, and became president of the company following the death of his brother, William R. Park in 1927. Charles F. Park continues to reside in Addison and is well-known to present day citizens of Addison and vicinity.

J. Stratton Park, son of Charles F., is a graduate of Addison High School, class of 1917. He attended the University of Michigan and was employed by the Irving National Bank of New York and the Franklin Trust Co. of Philadelphia. He then returned to Addison and entered the employ of Park, Winton and True. For approximately seven years he was eastern representative in charge of sales with headquarters in Newark, N. J. and New York City. Following the liquidation of Park, Winton & True, he established the J. S. Park Lumber & Supply Co. of which he is sole owner and manager.

An indication of the business handled by the J. S. Park Lumber & Supply Co., and the importance of this firm to Addison as a community is afforded by the fact that more than five thousand individual sales have been recorded during the past year in the office of this company. Clients have been attracted to Addison from a wide area surrounding and in practically every case, this has meant sales of other products upon the part of other local institutions.

COMMUNICATION

December 30, 1933

Editor, Advertiser,
Addison, N. Y.

Sitting this Saturday evening and reading your wonderful issue of the 75th anniversary of your paper, I as a citizen feel a deep sense of gratitude for the noble efforts of you and all your staff to build up and to maintain a worthy local paper for our community; and against strong adverse influences at every turn.

The best issue that the Advertiser has ever presented! It makes many of us, I am sure, feel that we want to help you. You seem to be winning too. God must be with you is the only way I can solve it.

Look at all the noble faces in that staff! The one I call "Mrs. Editor" is especially good. My only regret is that "dot Meister Sauerkraut Chas. Miller ist nicht in der bunch! He ought to be.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

The entrance of the year 1934 on our horizon, naturally leads men to wonder what the next twelve months has in store for each and every one of us. Uncertain as the prospect still may be, there is reason to hope that conditions will be a little better during the present year, than they have been in the past, for nearly every one.

Statisticians who have carefully studied the course of the depression, find positive evidence that the real bottom of this time of distress lay in the summer of 1932. There are people who would place the deepest dip of all during the bank holiday last March, but those who study dips and curves of charts generally agree the lowest point was reached some eight months earlier. There have been recessions since that time, but business on the whole is supposed to have gained some ten per cent during 1933 over 1932.

That is not a rapid gain by any means, but it is actual and any consistent move in the right direction must be viewed with hope. We have been subject to economic laws, and granting all the benefits temporary measures of relief may have abetted, the law of supply and demand is gradually pulling us out of this general distress. Since 1929 a population of more than 110 million people has been gradually wearing out more things than it has replaced with new, and thus there has accumulated through four years a growing market for materials which in the total must be stupendous.

For more than a year and a half men have been slowly going back to work; returning to their jobs by natural means. Then there has been a brave attempt to pump artificial respiration into the nation through temporary employment measures, which in the aggregate have alleviated some of the acuteness of unemployment. Every man returned to work is a move in the right direction, and must be considered an aid to better times in 1934.

It is quite possible that the federal government will go on a new tack in the near future; a tack which will be a more beneficial move than the civil works projects. One of the biggest lacks in the country through the depression, has been the lack of manufacturing of producers' goods, i. e., machinery, equipment and supplies that factories are constantly wearing out. Much outworn equipment has not been replaced, because, manufacturers have not had the money to spend, hence the making of producers' supplies has faded far more than the manufacture of consumers' supplies, such as clothing, food and the like. It is expected by some economists that the government will soon see that lending manufacturers the money to replace machinery, would be a more logical way to put men to work than spending the money for civil works, which must be ultimately paid for in taxes.

Once start up the wheels in industry on producers' materials and employment would get the greatest stimulus—actual benefit—than has yet been received. Such a move would be quickly reflected in this vicinity, for the Ingersoll-Rand at Painted Post would quickly spring into renewed activity making producers' goods.

These are bright spots which 1934 gives promise of bringing to us. But there is one note of discord still on the horizon. The principal barriers in the way of better times at present are excessive taxes and the threat of greater inflation. It is to be hoped that the Administration and Congress can be kept steered away from the issuance of paper currency, by a level-headed populace that knows the dangers awaiting such a move. Our move off the gold standard has failed to accomplish the hopes for rise in agricultural prices. Most thinking people are facing 1934 with the desire that our currency may not be debased to the point which brings panic.

If drastic inflation be avoided during 1934, then indeed, can America hope to see everyone enjoying better conditions than have prevailed during past months. This thought holds the hopes for a "Happy New Year".

TAXES STAND IN THE WAY

The weight of taxation is likely to be the most definite barrier to speedy recovery. At the moment, according to the New York Times, the national debt is $23,000,000,000 — an almost inconceivable sum, that must eventually be paid from the earnings of business and individuals.

Recent appropriations, a detailed report of the National Industrial Board points out, may amount to more than half of the indebtedness now outstanding. This is not a criticism—it is simply a fact. The public works bill embraces appropriations totaling $3, 150,000,000. The agricultural act will cost $1,100,000,000; farm credits, $2,485,000,000 and home loans, $2,200,000,000. It is estimated that the bank deposit guarantee law involves a total federal obligation of $2,000,000,000.

SEVEN FAT KINE

"Pharaoh dreamed: and behold he stood by the river. And behold there came up out of the river seven well favored kine and fatfleshed—"And behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favored and lean fleshed, and stood by the other kine upon the bank of the river.

"And the ill favored and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favored and fat kine. . . . . behold seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good. And behold, seven thin ears and blasted with the east wind sprung up after them. And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. Pharaoh awoke . . . and called for all the magicians and wise men of Egypt . . . but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh."

Seven years of plenty were followed by seven years of famine in the days of ancient Egypt, but Pharaoh in the end was fortunate enough to find a real prophet able to interpret his dreams through the agency of God. Joseph the Hebrew lad was able to tell the ruler, that seven years of plenty would be followed by seven years of famine, very grievous.

To many people living in this day it seems that an analogy must be drawn with the experience of ancient Egypt. For years the crops of America have been so abundant that the overproduction has glutted our markets. In our very abundance, and because of it, those who have food-stuffs to sell must accept prices below the cost of production. Out of our over-abundance has come the distress which grips every grower of food, and manufacturer of products.

The "wise men" of America are telling our farmers that the only way to restore prosperity is to cut down production and restrict what the land is sending forth. Plowing under crops and subsidizing farmers into raising smaller yields of all that grows out of the earth, is being held up as the remedy for present ills. We are told that this generation in order to restore prosperity, must throw overboard every rule of thrift and common sense which has contributed to the growth of independent fortunes and the progress of the country for more than 150 years.

Some of the theories of the college professors now dictating the course of the country today, are contrary to the universal laws that have governed the world from the days of ancient Eqypt. Every cycle of history has had its periods of abundant yields which have caused prices to become cheap, followed by its years of drought and crop failures when men have needed food and the prices have become prohibitive. To say that this is no longer true, is to say that God has changed his plans for the universe.

If we believe the Bible, and aside from a few "smart" agnostics and university professors whose over-stuffed brains will not admit the entrance of any save material things; who does not fundamentally believe it? If we believe in the Bible we must believe that the story of Joseph's travail and final success, is recorded as a lesson for the generations which follow him. Joseph's life is one of the first recorded examples of the wisdom and necessity of thrift and foresight, for human beings to follow. Even if one were not willing to accept the mystical side of the Bible, it is hard to understand how a thinking person could reject the common sense, often proved lesson of frugality which is taught in the last chapters of Genesis.

Should one desire more up-to-date proof of the wisdom of Joseph, and the fallacy of present lines of governmental thought, let him look at this day and age for the answer. Let him take any ten men, or any one hundred men for that matter and study their lives. Where will he find success in a majority of cases? In the man who spends all he earns today and forgets tomorrow, or the man who looks into the future and out of the years of his abundance lays something aside for the uncertain future? Few people would fly in the face of facts to dispute these examples of yesterday, today and the experience through the centuries.

America today is a land of over-abundance. Yet, if like Joseph, we were to take from our abundance a small part, say a tenth, and devote that fraction of our excess to feed those in starving lands, what would be left must necessarily be worth more in dollars than before we succored starving humanity.

May the folly of destroyed crops and limited production, not be carried too far. For this generation is still watching overly fat kine coming up out of the river, but no one knows how soon it will be seeing the lean kine of famine stalking up the bank ready to devour all that is left from the years of plenty. "Waste not, want not", is an old axiom which should not be forgotten. America, with its great population hovered in hundreds of cities has yet to know what a critical, widespread famine can mean. But with all our immense crops of wheat and corn, there is a comparatively small margin of safety between what we eat and what we produce. We never have enough food left over to supply the wants of a people through a year of complete crop failure. Let us hope the coming of the "Lean Kine" be stayed until a new crop of prophets with a clearer vision, be in the "seats of the mighty".

A Glimpse at The Fluency of Past Editors

The following editorials were from the pens of former editors of the Advertiser. They were taken from our files and prepared for the Diamond Jubilee edition to give readers a glimpse of the editorial style of our predecessors. George H. Hollis Editorial
March 3, '81

Tomorrow James A Garfield will be duly inaugurated president of the United States. He assumes the office under more favorable auspices than any other president has for twenty-four years. There is not so much bitterness between the north and south and the national credit is good. Both branches of Congress are politically very close and while the Republicans have not a clear majority they should be able to pass any measure which would clearly be beneficial to the country. Mr. Garfield is a man of ability and has an opportuntiy to distinguish himself more than any other president since President Lincoln. If he surrenders to the ring of politicians he will bring his administration into contempt with the people and the result will be the repudiation of the Republican party at the next national election. If he opposes the rings he will incur a very bitter fight in his own ranks, but the good sense of the people will bear him out in that case. His election to the presidency, it is to be hoped, will raise him above the politicians with whom he has been so long associated and awaken in him a true sense of duty which is to know only the country's interest.

NO UNCERTAIN VOICE

Editorial by Amos Roberts; issue of February 20, 1890.

The action taken by the Republican state committee at its meeting on Saturday last at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York City gives no uncertain or equivocal voice as to the true course for Republicans to follow in the consideration of the subject of holding the world's fair of 1892 in the city of New York and the authorization by the state legislature of the enormous amount of money necessary for the making of the financial part of the undertaking a success, by the bonding of that city for ten millions of dollars. The expenditure of even this enormous amount makes it necessary that the legislature should be wise in the disposition of the matter as into whose hands that vast amount of money should be placed for its economical expenditure. It is not a matter of Platt or anti-Platt. If the crying of a halt to the legislature in that decision has been brought about by Mr. Platt, it only goes to show his sagacity, as has been shown on several previous occasions. The caricaturing and abuse of him by the Democratic and mugwump newspapers, or subsidized Republicans, will not change the solution and we are glad to see that our state committee (the head of the Republican organization in this state) has deemed it wise to take this serious subject into consideration. It is an unusual thing (and we think it has never been done before in the history of the party) to call a winter meeting of the committee and attendance at that meeting shows the interest taken by our party leaders in matters pertaining, not only to the welfare of the Republican party, but of the people.

It is high time the party had leaders who would come to the front on important questions and not leave our legislators to grope in the dark, drifting hither and thither, not knowing where to rest. The state committee has now spoken emphatically and woe to the Republican who thinks himself greater than his party organization. Many have heretofore fallen in the political trench.

Mr. Platt was only ahead of his party in catching the alarm of the situation. His wise foresight saw the danger ahead which the state committee, in its wisdom, has now given warning of.

The only question after the one of authorizing the raising of ten millions of dollars by the bonding of the city of New York is settled by our Repuglican legislators, is the one whether they are willing to place the expenditure of that vast amount together with an additional amount by subscription, which will swell the total to near forty millions of dollars, in the hands of Tammany Hall in New York City, to be expended on the eve and during the excitement of a presidential campaign.

The executive committee that would have the immediate control of the expenditure of this money is composed of twenty-nine members—of which number there are only nine Republicans. Let Republicans look at the array of Tammanyites upon this committee and then judge for themselves whether the true Republicans in the legislature are taking the only true course for Republicans, or not.

Calvin S. Brice, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Abraham S. Hewitt, a former chairman of that committee.

Richard Crocker, the grand sachem of Tammany.

William C. Whitney, late secretary of the navy and now presidential aspirant.

Frederick Smyth, Tammany recorder of the City of New York.

John M. Bowers, general counsel of Tammany.

John Bogart, the late Democratic engineer and surveyor.

Theodore W. Myers, controller of the City of New York,

Edward Cooper, treasurer of the Democratic state committee.

John C. Calhoun, Tammany's representative in the southern states.

Walter Storm, Tammany alderman.

Wm. McM Speer, secretary of the committee and

We are told by the Democratic and mugwump newspapers to look at the prominent Republicans of New York City who will not wear the Platt collar. Well we do look and there we find:

Elihu Root, subsidized by Tammany, with the position of counsel to the Broadway railroad company—a Tammany institution from end to end.

Frank Raymond, clerk of a court controlled and officered by Tammany.

Solon B. Smith, judge of a court whose head is subject to the will of Tammany Hall and until the party can shake itself from such leadership in the Republican district organizations in the City of New York we need not hope for an increase in the Republican vote of that city.

Republicans stand by the true interests of the Republican party and the people, and hold up the hands of the senators and that true majority of Republicans in the assembly in their fight against the thirsty attempts of Tammany Hall and those recreant Republicans who are bound by that organization and wear its collar, to get the control of this vast amount of money.

The Republican county committee of the city of New York was called together on Saturday last and that, too, endorsed the amendment provided by the senate.

If the words we have written be "Plattsim" then we are proud of it, for we wear no Tammany Hall collar.

WHAT THE VICTORY MEANS

B. Vastbinder Ed — Nov. 6, 1908

The country has voted emphatically to continue the policies of the Roosevelt administration and to continue them under the leadership of the man whom it considers President Roosevelt's logical succesor. The question of heirship has been definitely settled and Mr. Bryan's fantastic claim that he, not Mr. Taft was the legitimate legatee goes glimmering with those many other false alarms with which he has waked the echoes since he began his variegated career as an impressionist and opportunist politician. The decisive character of Mr. Taft's victory shows that the American public is not to be captured by specious pretences and hollow promises and that it will not surrender the substance of orderly, progressive and responsible administration for the shadow of hasty, drastic and impracticable reforms. There can be no doubt, in view of the country's verdict, that a great number of the voters thoroughly approve the policies which the Repubican party has been putting into practice in the last four years and that they recognize in Mr. Taft an ideal instrument for the future development of those polices. In electing him president the nation indicates its purpose not to rest until the abuses which the Republican party attacked are rooted out of our political, commercial and industrial life and undemocratic inequality and favoritism have permanently given place to the "square deal."

Mr. Taft's election was due to the measures and ideals for which he stood and to the admirable demonstration which he gave throughout the campaign of simplicity, poise and candor.

He established a marked success as a campaigner because he had nothing to conceal and spoke out of a clear conscience and with absolute conviction. He was the same man east, west, north and south while his opponent tried to temper his principles to his latitude and longitude and be all things to all sections. Unaccustomed to the strain of continuous speaking Mr. Taft developed unexpected capacity as a vote getter and won the confidence of thousands who had never met him face to face and may have been prejudiced against him by malicious misrepresentations. He could do this because in all his utterances he was transparently sincere, honest and straightforward.

Mr. Taft comes into office with a great popular majority behind him. He will be supported by a House of Representatives Republican by majority a little under a hundred, and a Senate two-thirds Republican. There will be no obstacle to his carrying out the pledges of constructive legislation given both in his speeches and in the Republican platform. His equipment for discharging the duties of the presidency are superb and his political aims are high. He will have opportunity to impress himself on history such as has been offered to few of his predecessors. He will live up to the possibilities of his station and the magnitude of his task.

Many reasons for congratulation occur to the mind rejoicing in Governor Hughes' splendid victory. The winner himself is to be congratulated upon his well-deserved triumph. The Republican party is to be congratulated upon the retention of so valuable a servant. But it seems, most of all, that the people of the state deserve congratulation upon the high quality of citizenship they have displayed. Mr. Bryan asked: "Shall the people rule?" In the election of Mr. Hughes they have ruled and they have demonstrated again and in a new and striking manner, that they were fit to rule—excellently fit to rule. They have shown their appreciation of the highest qualities in public life, intellectual and moral leadership of a superior variety. High ideals and an unbending adhesion to them, an unselfish devotion to the public interest and a courageous defiance of every force opposed to it, a fine faith in reason and a steadfast refusal to stoop to any demagogic act. Men went about the state saying that a man exhibiting these qualities was "too good" for public life, but the people have shown that he was not too good for them, that no one like him can be too good for them. They have shattered the old illusion that in aiming high in public life there is a danger in going over the people's heads and have thereby tremendously encouraged the faith of everyone who believes in the people and popular government.

Mr. Hughes runs considerably behind Mr. Taft in the state as has been usual with Republican candidates for Governor in recent national elections but his nomination unquestionably added a great strength to the ticket in New York and elsewhere and helped to confirm the position of party as a moral agency. He is one of the party's great men, of whom it is justly proud. It is in its capacity to breed such men as Hughes, Roosevelt and Taft in comparison to Democratic party's poverty in serviceable leadership, that has made it so remarkably successful in recent years. So long as it continues rich in such leaders it deserves to win and will win.

Old Steuben lived up to its record of staunch Republicanism and returned handsome Republican majorities for the national and state tickets and elected every Republican candidate but one, the candidate for school commissioner in the first district. The splendid Republican showing is a source of hearty congratulation to Chairman John E. Olmstead and the others of the Republican County Committee throughout the county. Mr. Olmstead has served as chairman since last spring, but the capable manner in which he has handled the present presidential campaign shows him to be a capable and efficient Chairman. The organization has stood staunch behind him and the result is the

State Legislature Gathers With Many New Assemblymen

Albany, Jan. 2— Provided everybody is well and able to come, there will be 44 new faces in the Assembly when it convenses tomorrow for its 157th annual session, of whom 28 will be on the Republican side and 16 on the Democratic. The latter group will include one woman, Miss Dora Byrne, a lawyer from the Bronx, New York City. The last woman to sit in the Assembly was Mrs. Rhoda Fox Graves of St. Lawrence County. For the past couple of years it has been composed of men only. Among the Senators, who are elected in even-numbered years, for two-year terms, there will be but a single stranger, Lazarus Joseph, a Democrat, chosen to represent the Twenty-first District, Bronx, New York, to succeed Senator Shackno, who has resigned to accept a judgeship in that city. His election allows the Democrats to retain control of the Senate, 26 to 25. This year the Republicans have 85 members in the Assembly compared with 77 last year, the Democrats dropping from 73 to 65.

Another Busy Session

All signs point to a very busy session. Leaders on the ground say it isn't going to be a scrappy one, as they are all intent on peace and accommodation, but they say that every year. And it usually starts off that way. But soon occasion arises for a radical difference of opinion, and then the fur begins to fly. There are plenty of occasions for such differences this year in the program ahead. It includes, among other things, taxes, utilities, relief for owners of mortgaged homes, reform of government in New York City and up-State, horse-racing, election frauds, liquor regulation and several hundred other topics such as the fertile minds of the legislators are always able to dig up.

Chief Debater Not Returned

Even at that, there are some who hope for a fairly short session. They point out that the Assembly, at least, ought to save several days since Louis Cuvillier of New York City, will not be back. Assemblyman Cuvillier probably did pretty close to a fourth of all the debating in the Assembly. He was a studious member, took his job seriously, and few measures ever were considered to which he did not contribute a discussion. He was a leader among the wets for many years and at every session introduced a long list of liquor bills. It is significant of the changes in issue and men that both Mr. Cuvillier, champion of the wets, and Mr. Jenks of Broome, long champion of the drys, are out of the Assembly picture in the first session after prohibition repeal, Mr. Jenks having been retired a year earlier than his oft-time opponent.

State and Nation Start Together

For the first time in history the legislative bodies of the State of New York and the Nation will start off together tomorrow. Under the State Constitution the New York Legislature assembles in the first Wednesday of January each year. Until this year, the United States Congress has met on the first Monday in December, but by the recent "lame duck" amendment the opening date is changed to January 3 of each year, which in 1934 happens to be the first Wednesday. In 1935 Father Knickerbocker will get off a day ahead of Uncle Sam, since the first Wednesday in January is the 2d of the month.

Investigators Delay Decision

The committee of Assemblymen which had a hearing at the Capitol last Wednesday to inquire into the question of re-electing Fred W. Hammond of Syracuse as clerk surprised the public on the following day by announcing that it would not render a decision, but would lay before the full Republican caucus to be held here tonight all the evidence it collected and allow the larger body to give the verdict. The hearing was a very unusual one, nothing like it having been seen here within the memory of old attaches of the Capitol. It grew out of State Chairman Macy's recent speech at Utica, in which he asked for the removal of Mr. Hammond on the ground that his influence in behalf of legislative action desired by utility interests has been harmful to the party and largely responsible for successive defeats of the State ticket for the past dozen years.

Chairman Declines to Appear

The investigating committee, formed by a caucus of the Republican members on December 20, invited Mr. Macy to appear before it and give the information on which he based his statements concerning Mr. Hammond, and along with him Mr. Hammond, H. Edmund Machold, former Speaker and former State Chairman, now an officer in numerous utility companies, Speaker McGinnies, and several others. Mr. Macy had previously pointed out that the committee was not an official body, but a purely voluntary one, without authority to subpoena individuals, books or accounts, and suggested he would be glad to cooperate in an investigation by a proper committee. On this basis he did not appear at the hearing, but sent a letter in which he reaffirmed his statements at Utica. Mr. Machold, Clerk Hammond and some half dozen members of the Assembly took the stand and all declared they never influenced anybody else or were influenced themselves in the matter of utility legislation.

Renken Plant Important Local Industry

The Renken milk plant in Addison is today receiving milk from 273 producers in the Addison area. It is one of the outstanding activities of the community at the present time.

The plant was established here in 1913 in the building formerly occupied by the Howell Condensed Milk Co. B. B. Smith, present district manager with supervision over all Renken plants in this area, was sent here as resident manager when the plant was opened and continued in the same capacity until April 15, 1933, when he was promoted to the new position. At that time, Percy Smith was sent here from one of the Renken plants in Orange County to have charge of the Addison plant.

The milk goes from here in tank cars to Jersey City. It is then trucked in tank conveyances to the main plant of the Renken Company in Brooklyn, where it is pasteurized, bottled and distributed to the four branch plants in varying districts, from where it is distributed to the retail trade.

In addition to the Addison plant, which is the oldest in this area, the Renken Company maintains plants at Osceola, Middlebury Center, Westfield and Canoecamp, Pa. The majority of these Pennsylvania plants have been opened within the past nine years. When the Addison plant was started twenty years ago, milk totaling twenty-two cans was received from eighteen patrons. Today, four hundred and fifty cans are received daily from two hundred and seventy-three patrons. The Pennsylvania plants receive milk totaling from 1800 cans in summer to 4000 cans in winter from approximately nine hundred patrons.

Employees of the Renken Company residing in Addison are B. B. Smith, district manager; Wesley Peterson, barn inspector and field man; Percy Smith, manager of the Addison plant; and Leo Demorest, Thomas Grandon, Robert Cummings, George Johnson and Chauncey Hibbard, all associates in the local plant.

Onondaga county 4-H clubs have won permanent possession of the Tioga sweepstakes trophy for 4-H poultry exhibits at the state fair. In order to retain the trophy, a county must win it three times.

Pulteney Purchase Important In Early History of Addison

After an existence of more than a century and a history whose legal aspect is peculiar among land transactions of the world, the famous Pulteney estate will soon be only a memory. The American agent of the domain, H. J. Wynkoop, has announced that as soon as the remaining acreage of the estate can be disposed of its affairs will be wound up and what is supposed to be the oldest British holding company in this country will pass from the hands of its hereditary possessors forever. Noble blood has flowed in their veins and at least one has become a king. The property yielded to its owners a profit of $6,000,000 and upon lands that were once theirs in tenure are now situated some of the richest and most flourishing villages of the state. Nine counties have been parcelled out from the boundaries of the estate and its original extent as the greatest part of the original Phelps and Gorham purchase of 1788. Of the 1,264,000 acres which it once comprised, all but 2,000 have been sold, with the exception of a small lumber tract in Virginia. Yet this strange and almost haunting peculiarity permeates the whole story of the purchase. Did the owners really own what they possessed and were their predecessors in possession the rightful holders of the property which they sold? The paradox which this complicated question seems to present has puzzled the learned minds of jurists for a century and although the courts have passed upon it many times favorably to the Pulteney tenure, yet no definite answer has ever been made. A suit is now pending in the Supreme Court of the state which will probably settle once for all this perplexing problem. It is brought by the Seneca Indians against Appleby and is an outgrowth of the transactions by the Ogden Land Company, which was brought into existence by the Phelps and Gorham purchase. The Vreeland bill, whose defeat in Congress was hailed with such delight by friends of the New York Indians, was the immediate cause of the action.

The Phelps and Gorham purchase is one of the most interesting transactions on record in any country of the globe. That this is not an exaggerated fact the reader may judge from the recital of its various steps from the very beginning. In 1620 Charles I of England granted to the Plymouth Company a tract of land in the New World, extending in width through several degrees of latitude and stretching from the Atlantic Ocean straight across North America to the Pacific. That was the usual way in which monarchs in those days gave out land grants in the newly discovered Western world. They had no idea how far west it might extend; that problem never bothered their brains. The width they had some concern with; the length was another matter. Then there entered into the question of these grants another factor, which while it gave no more concern to the reckless princes who handed out the parcels, yet possessed a moral and legal aspect most puzzling to jurists and historians. What right had the monarchs to these lands they gave away to favorites and to companies with such generous profusion? Were the lands theirs by right of discovery, conquest or purchase? What had the people whom the Colonists found in possession to say about it? The answer to these questions has never been satisfactorily delivered, yet upon the truth of it has hung for hundreds of years the tenure of property whose value now is almost beyond computation, such as the millions of acres comprised in this Phelps and Gorham purchase and its successor, the Pulteney estate.

Overlapping Grants

The first charter was granted to the Plymouth Company in 1628 by Charles I, but was vacated in 1684. A second charter was granted in 1691, and gave to the company that tract of land extending between the parallels of 42 degrees 2 minutes and 44 degrees 15 minutes north latitude, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In other words, this tract was as great in width as are the New England states today and in length that of the continent, including in its western progress most of the present state of New York. Now it so happened that in 1663 King Charles II granted to the Duke of York and Albany all that property which was embraced in what is now New York, New Jersey and part of Pennsylvania to the southern boundary of Canada, which was then a French province. The result of these two grants is easily apparent; they overlapped when the Pennsylvania line was passed and in New York were one and the same territory. When the Revolution ended and the new states began to look to their boundaries, Massachusetts and New York were in quick conflict over the possession of the disputed lands held under royal grant by each colony. Both states ceded to the United States all their holdings west of the Niagara river, leaving in the balance the territory embraced by the state of New York. This amounted to about 19,000 square miles. The question, however, was settled satisfactorily at the Hartford convention of 1786, by the terms of whose agreement Massachusetts yielded to New York the government and jurisdiction of all territory which lay west of a line running from a point 82 miles west of the northeastern course of Pennsylvania due north through Seneca Lake to what is now Sodus Bay in Wayne county, with the exception of a small strip on the east shore of the Niagara river, which was reserved by New York. This immense stretch of wilderness, or, as it was officially known "terra incognita" was six million acres in extent and over it, Massachusetts, for her part, reserved the preemptive right, subject to the title of the natives. Rumors of the fabulous richness of the lands in the Genesee Valley began to spread to the East and soon settlers started westward for the new Garden of Eden. Troubles of a serious nature arose over the attempt on the part of the two so-called lesser companies, the New York Genesee Company and the Canada Genesee Company, to lease the lands from the Indians at a ridiculous price for a term of 999 years. Governor Clinton put a stop to this practice by vigorous measures and the Indians' titles were safe.

In 1788 Oliver Phelps, of Connecticut, and Nathaniel Gorham of Massachusetts, formed a company for the purchase of pre-emption from the state of Massachusetts. This was sold to them for $100,000 and in July of that year they held a council with the Indians at Buffalo and purchased from the Indians for $5,000 down and $500 a year "forever" a territory extending over 2,600,000 acres and bounded by the line of pre-emption on the east, Pennsylvania on the south as far west as the junction of the Genesee River and Canaseraga Creek, then north along the Genesee River to a point near the southern boundary of the present county of Monroe, then west twelve miles and north to the shore of Lake Ontario. Phelps penetrated the wilderness and took charge himself of surveying and settling the country. His headquarters were at Canandaigua and his ancient manor house still rears its Colonial pillars among the green foliage of the remarkable trees on the hills above Canandaigua Lake. Gorham never saw his lands and lived and died in Charleston. In 1789 the two partners ceded back to Massachusetts a portion of their purchase. In 1790 financial difficulties faced them like darkening clouds and after only one-third of the tract had been sold to settlers, Phelps and Gorham transferred to Robert Morris, the famous financier of the Revolution, 1,264,000 acres at the rate of 8d (about 15 cents) an acre.

The Pulteney Purchase

Morris, in turn, sold at a great increase to Sir William Pulteney of England and two associates—John Harnby, governor of Bombay, and Patrick Colquhon, a statesman and philanthropist of prominence in his day. The transfer was made through Col. Charles Williamson, a shrewd and energetic Scotchman, who represented Sir William Pulteney in this country. He held the territory in trust for his patron until March, 1801, on account of a state law which made it impossible for foreigners to own land within the boundaries of New York. At the date named this law was repealed and Sir William became the owner in his own name.

The huge tract of land, even after Phelps and Gorham had endeavored to survey it, was yet a wilderness, with few settlements. Canandaigua was prosperous, Geneva was just beginning. Catherine's Town on Seneca Lake was a collection of cabins, hardly worth the name of a village. Colonel Williamson moved his headquarters to what is now Bath and began the task of clearing out and colonizing the wild forests and trackless jungles. Soon settlers began to flock in and little towns gathered and grew. The rich wheat and orchard lands became cleared and little by little crops took the place of underbrush and farms spread further and further out. The Indians were friendly and but few unpleasant features marred the rapid prosperity of the estate. Col. Williamson remained at the head of affairs long enough to see the property launched upon the tide of success and then returned to Scotland where he died in 1808. Upon Sir William Pulteney's death the estate was devised to his daughter the Countess of Bath. From her it descended to Sir John Lowther Johnstone, thence to the Duke of Cumberland, who afterward became King of Hanover; Charles Pierrepont, Earl of Manners, David Cathcart, Lord of Alloway, and Masterson Ure in trust, with instructions to dispose of the holdings as rapidly as possible. This was done as described above and in a short time the last of the great estate with its billion and a quarter acres, will be deeded to purchasers and the business ended. The office of the estate has been located at Bath for more than a century and has seen the receipts of more than $6,000,000 for lands which were purchased for almost a song. Col. Williamson was succeeded as agent by Robert Troup of New York. The agents in later years have been Dugald Cameron, Mr. Mc Coy, Joseph Fillows, B. F. Young and H. J. Wynkoop, who is now in charge. Up to twenty years ago a secondary office was maintained at Geneva, but as the estate grew smaller it was abandoned and the business all transacted in Bath.

The size of the original estate may be gathered from the fact that within its borders are the whole counties of Steuben, Yates, Ontario, part of Wayne, most of Monroe, including the site of the city of Rochester; small parts of Genesee and Livingston and half of Alleghany counties. Hundreds of villages, some of them almost large enough to be called cities, such as Bath, Lyons, Corning, Penn Yan, Hornellsville, two cities, Rochester and Geneva, although the former was originally upon the land of the Phelps Company, have sprung up within a century to take the place of gloomy woods and tangled thickets. Thousands of rich and valuable farms lie within its valleys—in a word, the heart of the richest state in the Union has been carved out of this great property, which was bought and sold at hardly more than a Shilling an acre.

Chart Meat Department Oldest in Village

John E. Chart, whose store is located at Main and Steuben streets, operates the oldest meat market in Addison. In addition to meats, he carries groceries, vegetables and fruits. He is a member of the Standard Food Stores Association.

Mr. Charts father, the late Edwin Chart, started a general store here about fifty-five years ago. The son John, was eventually taken into the business. The store was located on Railroad avenue at the start, then was moved to the Baldwin Block where the Whitmore hardware now stands. A second change, this time to the present location, was made about fifty-four years ago. The meat department was added about two or three years after moving to the present corner.

Following the death of the father, the store was conducted by John E. and his brother, Harry Chart. The latter died after a short time in the business and the store has been operated since by John E. Chart. The store is noted for quality foodstuffs at reasonable prices.

Harry Laffkas Successful In Confectionery

Harry Laffkas Scorns Misfortune; Building Burns, Rebuilds Toward Greater Success.

Opportunity comes to him who waits and works. Harry Laffkas, Addison confectionery man, waited, worked—and won.

Born in the City of Moli, province of Sparta, Greece, Mr. Laffkas came to America in 1893. He remained in New York City for eighteen months, then came to Elmira, N. Y., where friends in his native land had preceded him. He remained in Elmira three months, then back to New York, and once more to Elmira, where he entered the employ of Laskaris Brothers. Shortly thereafter this concern sold its interest in Elmira and opened a store in Port Jervis, N. Y., Mr. Laffkas going with them.

From Port Jervis to Danbury, Conn., was his next jump. He remained there but a short time, however, then went back to New York where he served as a clerk in a flower shop at the corner of 23rd St. and 7th Ave. Laskaris Bros. again opened in Elmira and Corning sometime later, however, and they sent for Harry to come back and join them. This he did, being assigned to the Corning store. Next was an independent business venture for himself, rather a partnership with Frank Carr which was carried on successfully for fourteen months.

Mr. Laffkas then sold out his interest in the partnership to Mr. Carr and returned to New York where he entered the employ of his uncle at 105th St and 3rd Ave. Eight months later, he was back in Corning, this time with L. L. Laskaris, who subsequently sold out to Bacalles Bros. Mr. Laffkas then went back to the Laskaris store in Elmira. In November, 1900, with George Anderson as a partner he purchased the business of his former partner Frank Carr They continued the business until 1907 when they sold out to Bacalles Bros.

On May 14, 1908, Mr. Laffkas purchased the confectionery store of Jacob Fix in Addison then located where the old high school gymnasium now stands. In 1918, the building was destroyed by fire. Undaunted, he purchased the property on Main street diagonally across from the American House. He completely remodeled the building which stood on this site, added a modern new brick front and with all alterations completed, opened anew on May 23, 1919.

Home-made candy and home-made ice cream of exceptionally fine taste and quality have established an enviable reputation for Mr. Laffkas' products over a wide area. Despite the close attention required by his business, however, he has found time to serve in the public interest. For two separate terms he was a member of the village board of trustees. Subsequent to this he was honored by election as village president. He is now serving his fourth term of three years each as member of the Addison school board.

Dykins Specialist on Fine Photographs

Photographs of fine quality are a speciality of Ralph B. Dykins, Addison photographer. Mr. Dykins does a complete professional portrait, commercial, amateur finishing and picture framing business.

Mr. Dykins came here from Galeton, Pa., eleven years ago. He is a graduate of the Illinois College of Photography at Effingham, Ill., and is a member of the local photographer's association from this area known as the Finger Lakes section of Professional Photographer's Association, also of the national association.

Mr. Dykins also maintains a studio at Elkland, Pa., which is open on Saturday of each week.

Market Basket Opened Here in 1926

The Market Basket Store came to Addison in 1926. About two years later this company absorbed the Cash Food Store. In July 1931 a combination meat and grocery store was introduced.

Eugene W. Bebout is manager of the Addison store with S. G. Ricker as manager of the meat department.

A family gathering was enjoyed Christmas Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Perry on South street. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Miller, Mrs. Carrie Crittenden, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Elroy O. History of Wm. Wombough

The following sketch of William Wombough was taken from Clayton's History of Steuben County.

—Editor's note

The personal history of William Wombough is so intimately connected with the settlement and growth of the Tuscarora Valley where now is located the thrifty village of Addison, that it forms no unimportant part of the general history of this part of the county of Steuben.

He was born in Monmouth Co., N. J., in the year 1769. His parents were of German birth and his father came to America about the year 1765 settling in New Jersey. He had no opportunity for any education from books and could neither read nor write, but his very eventful and successful business career demonstrated that a practical education as often secures financial success.

While a young man he settled in Delaware County, N. Y., and engaged in lumbering, rafting his lumber to Philadelphia. There he hemained eleven years and in the year 1804 removed to the Tuscarora Valley and settled in the almost wilderness and Indian country, where the now beautiful and cultivated fields vie with the best in the state in point of agriculture. He at once purchased one hundred eighty acres of land where now his son, William resides, built a sawmill and in 1806 erected a grist-mill on the Tuscarora Creek, where in 1830 he erected a second one which is still standing. By this time he had added to his original purchase, so that now he owned some two thousand acres of land. In 1833 he removed to Woodhull and purchased some five hundred acres of land where the village of Newville now is and there erected a gristmill. In the year 1835 he removed to Troupsburgh, purchased some five hundred acres of land and erected a saw-mill. There he remained until 1842, when he returned to Addison and a few years afterward erected a grist-mill (it being the fifth) on the present site of the sash factory now owned by Messrs. McKay and Hill.

In order to furnish his first gristmill with proper machinery he was obliged to go to Philadelphia, which he did in a lumber wagon and returned with wagon loaded with weighty machinery. The incidents connected with such a trip through forests, rough roads, its privations and necessary economy and hardships, are in striking contrast with the rapid transit of the railroad car of the present day. Being now at the advanced age of eighty he never after engaged in any new enterprises. After a brief illness of only four days he died from the effects of a paralytic stroke, at the ripe age of eighty-four, in the year 1853.

It is impossible in a short space to do any more than give an outline of his history. He came into this valley, moving his goods in boats up the Susquehanna, Chemung and Canisteo Rivers and lived during that period of the settlement of the country where there was little or no machinery to lessen manual labor; and about the time of his death the completion of the Erie Railway and the introduction of mowing and other machinery made a radical change in the mode of rapid transit of persons and goods and in the time to accomplish a given amount of work. It is worthy of note here that the Indians were in the neighborhood and that they were known to come to the settlement and purchase powder, but never to make purchase of any lead; hence, it was always supposed by the settlers that there was a lead mine nearby; but the secret, if there was one, was never disclosed by the natives and no information of its location discovered.

Mr. Wombough was strong in his political inclinations and a staunch member of the Whig party. In the war of 1812 he was drafted but hired a substitute, paying therefor sixty dollars. The progeny of this most remarkable business man is quite numerous in and about Addison and makes up many of the representative families of the village.

His wife was Elizabeth Towsley, who did her part well and trained her children in all that makes true manhood and womanhood. She died at the age of seventy-nine.

His children were Henry, born 1800 (deceased); Mrs. Rufus Baldwin, 1802, (deceased); William, 1811; Mrs. Ira P. Bennett, 1813; Mrs. Peter Striker, 1815; Mrs. James B. Murdock, 1818, (deceased); Mrs. Col. George Farnham, 1823 (deceased); Mrs. Gilbert B. Brewster, 1828 and Addison Wombough, 1831.

Janet Gaynor Teamed Again With Baxter

Actor Who Scored in "Daddy Long Legs" coming in "Paddy"

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are to be seen in their newest film on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday when "Paddy, The Next Best Thing", the latest from the studios of Fox Film opens at the Star Theatre for an engagement of three days. The two stars were last seen together in "Daddy Long Legs" and their success was so great that they were again assigned to complement each other.

Her thirteenth characterization for Fox, "Paddy", the madcap Irish lass, offers Janet Gaynor something absolutely new. Paddy's greatest asset is at the same time her worst liability. For she possesses the uncanny faculty of enslaving the affection of those with whom she comes into contact. It is an asset because it smooths the rough spots of life—a liability because it makes her an utter stranger to discipline.

Miss Gaynor has what is reported as her strongest role to date. For in addition to her well-known wistfulness she is here required to display her newly-found spirit. She is a rogue — and she is irresistibly charming. As the man who brings her down to earth and convinces her of his love, Warner Baxter is said to be in his most popular element. He is suave, handsome and the gentlest of lovers.

The cast that Fox Film has gathered around its two stars is one of the most notable ever seen on the screen. It has Walter Connolly, star of the Broadway stage, Harvey Stephens, Margaret Lindsay, Mary McCormic, Joseph M. Kerrigan, Fiske O'Hara, Claire McDowell, Merle Tottenham, Roger Imhof and Trevor Bland.

The locale of the film, directed by Harry Lachman, is the rugged coast of Ireland. The screen play from Gertrude Page's novel, was written by Edwin Burke who is also responsible for the dialogue direction. He will be remembered for his screen authorship of "Bad Girl" one of the most popular screen plays ever presented.

Overhead Proceedings Are Closed

Albany, Dec. 22 — Proceedings for the elimination of the Main Street and Wall Street crossings of the Erie Railroad in the village of Addison, Steuben County, have been closed by the Public Service Commission on the grounds that public welfare does not require the elimination of these crossings.

The commission designated the Church Street crossing for elimination and directed that it be eliminated by closing the crossing across the railroad with standard highway barricades.

There are rather large amounts of railroad and highway traffic over the Main Street crossing but the amounts of highway traffic over Wall Street and Church Street crossing are very small. The views on one approach to Main Street crossings are somewhat limited and the grade on the approach is about 4% descending toward the crossing. From the evidence submitted it appears to be very expensive to obtain a satisfactory elimination of the Main Street crossing at this time in harmony with a possible future layout of the state highway.

It does not appear that the expense necessary to carry out any of the plans submitted for elimination or diversion of traffic would be justified at this time. The interested parties did not object to the closing of Church Street crossing as the amount of highway and pedestrian traffic over that crossing is very small and the amount of railroad traffic rather large.

The representative of the county and of the Department of Public Works recommended that the proceedings be closed for the elimination of the Main and Wall Street crossings. There was objection from the village to the closing of Wall Street as that crossing can be blocked by trains. The Main Street crossing is protected by gates 24 hours per day.

A. H. S. Sextet Took Alumni Girls By 34 to 19 Score

Playing a tight defensive game in the first half the alumni girls became somewhat demoralized in the third quarter and lost to the A. H. S. sextet 34 to 19.

The game saw the return to court play of Wilma Root Mose, outstanding star forward of the champion girls' sextet of 1927-28. Wilma made 13 points, just two short of the high scorer of the varsity girls, who had 7 field baskets and one foul score. For the alumni Hewson made two baskets and Whitmore one. Tobin made five baskets for the high school, Chart four and Burlingame one.

The score by quarters was, first: high school 5, alumni 3; second, high school 11, alumni 7; third, high school 26, alumni 9; fourth, high school 34, alumni 19.

Doddato Home Made Confections Are Popular

Some thirty years age the books of Horatio Alger were all the rage with boys. They pleased the boys because they dealt with boys—the courageous, alert type of chap who overcome difficulties.

About the time that Horatio Alger was ministering to the literary and inspirational hunger of American youth, an Italian lad in his early twenties, from a small community in the vicinity of Rome, landed in New York. The world was before him. It was his to conquer—if he could. It was the Alger boy in real life.

His name, however, was not the Tom or Harry of the fiction books. It was Peter Doddato. For twenty-eight years he has been winning his way. For years he has been the owner of a prosperous confectionery business. He is noted for delicious home-made ice cream and candies. And he is known as a good citizen, who has lived substantially, yet unostentatiously; who has provided his children with good educations, and who really deserves whatever success has come his way.

Following his arrival, as a youthful emmigrant, in New York, back in 1906, Mr. Doddato came on to Bath, where he worked for four years at the Soldiers Home. Then in 1910, he started in business for himself on Main street in Bath. Five years later he purchased the confectionery business of Lynn A. Taylor here in Addison, then located where the store of M. G. Hubbs is now situated. Mr. Doddato continued there for six years, then in 1921, he purchased the Commercial House block and moved his store to the site it has continuously occupied ever since. Here, daily, he dispenses Doddato's candies, ice cream and sodas—all favorites in the refreshment field.

Erwin Store Is Oldest Grocery in Town

The oldest grocery business in Addison is that operated by Samuel C. Erwin. Mr. Erwin took over the store on April 16, 1906, from Clare Colburn who had previously conducted the business. He was in partnership with Howard O. Crane for a number of years.

The Erwin store carries a general line of groceries, crockery, and home supplies. Before returning here in 1906 to engage in business, Mr. Erwin had for a number of years been engaged with a Rochester furniture house.

Addison High Varsity Too Strong For Old Graduates

Playing a steady, consistent game all evening, the Addison High School basket ball team defeated one of the best graduate fives that ever represented the alumni on the school court, last Friday evening. The alumni quintet made up of college boys and semi-pro players showed a classy style of offensive throughout the game, but the varsity lads were able to beat them by a fine display of teamwork which gave Coach Hewson's tossers sufficient advantage to win 33 to 22. What few Addison fans attended the game were glad to have another opportunity to see in action again, such court stars of yesterday as Phil and Charles Hickey, Milt Crane, Neil Smith, John Grange and George Hopper. Robbins was high scorer for the varsity with ten points, while Smith made the same for the alumni.

The alumni drew first blood as the first attempted play clicked, Neil getting the tap on the first center ball the sphere going to Milt Crane who dashed down center court to score a shot from in front of the basket. Hovey evened things up by cutting through defense to score. Neil was fouled and missed his chance, but Lawrence Hickey fouled as he tried for a basket put the Addisonites in the lead by registering both free throws. Hovey tossed another field goal and Neil made a sweet basket from a difficult angle before the quarter ended 6 to 4 in favor of the school.

The varsity went into a scoring rampage in the second quarter making 12 points while their opponents added 4. Grange got his first basket at the beginning of the period to tie the score, and then the Addisonites woke up. Robbins tossed one in, Wilson edged in for a cripple and Robbins and Flynn, who had taken Hovey's place, each added one from the foul line. Neil Smith scored a basket for the alumni. Robbins sneaked through the grads' cohorts for a cripple and Wilson made another field basket. Then Hargrave, who had entered the line-up, made a sweet toss that counted two points more, to end the half 18 to 8.

Play slowed down in the third quarter the varsity adding 9 points and the alumni 2. Robbins scored one from the foul line at the opening of the half. Wilson and Robbins each made field goals and Phil Hickey missed a foul shot. Robbins slipped in close for a cripple and Lawrence Hickey tossed one through the meshes from the corner. John Grange made a double decker, bringing the count to 27 to 10.

The fourth period found Coach Hewson putting several of his reserves into the firing line, Lindsley, Hargrave and Root playing most of the quarter, and the alumni found their second wind to score 12 points as Milt Crane and Neil Smith went on the rampage. Neil made a field basket at the beginning of the quarter and Milt tossed two more in quick succession. Hargrave made his second basket of the game, Neil following with another. Flynn got a basket and Lindsley broke into the score column with a nice toss for a couple of points more. Neil made his fifth field basket and just before the final gun sounded Charles Hickey brought back old times by registering one of his typical shots.

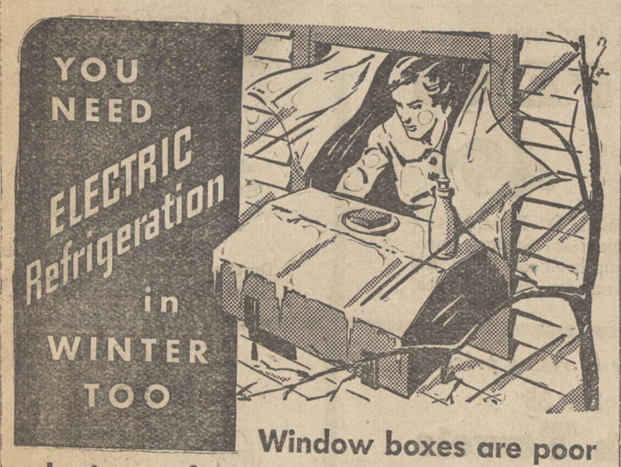
Cleanliness First Essential At Sanitary Barber Shop

The Sanitary Barber Shop where cleanliness is looked upon as the first essential of proper service to the public, was opened by Roy L. Omelion in the Sisto Block in March, 1932. The shop has continued in the same location since that time.

Mr. Omelion feels that strictly sanitary conditions should prevail in the modern shop, is particular that all instruments are sterilized between every customer. His shop is attractively arranged and thoroughly equipped to meet the current desire for sanitation and convenience.

Before coming here Mr. Omelion had been employed as a barber in Mansfield and other Northern Pennsylvania communities.

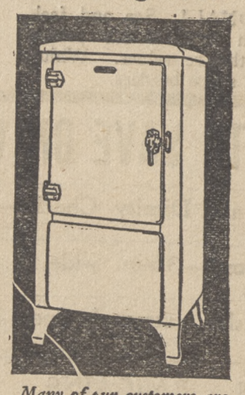
Why Wait TILL NEXT SUMMER



Window boxes are poor substitutes for the gleaming whiteness and constant cold of an electric refrigerator

Dust or snow sifts through the cracks on windy days and the ups and downs of winter weather make outdoor refrigeration only a little less dangerous to food than kitchen temperatures. Perishable food should never be allowed to freeze. It loses its flavor, and when it thaws out in a warm room it spoils quickly.

Present low prices of electric refrigerators and convenient monthly terms make it unnecessary for any family to put up with window boxes and other make-shift methods of refrigeration this winter. It will not only make the food of every meal more tempting, but it will cut food expenses all year round.



Many of our customers are finding that the money saved by an electric refrigerator enables them to make the monthly payments under our convenient purchase plan.

Potato Growers Convene At Wayland

During the past week arrangements have been made to hold the Seventh Steuben County Convention at Wayland. The meeting will be held in the Legion Theatre, February 8 and 9, Lee Edmond, chairman of the potato committee announces.

The local arrangements for the annual session are being made by Fred Mehlenbacher, chairman of the Wayland township farm bureau committee. Prominent speakers are being engaged to appear on the program and there will be an extensive potato show. Potatoes will be shown in three groups, a county-wide class for Green Mountains and two classes for Smooth Rurals, east and west of the Conhocton River. Each exhibit is to consist of nine potatoes and substantial cash prizes will be awarded. Art Wagner of Cohocton will be clerk of the show.

Wayland is the largest potato shipping point in Western New York and it is expected that the attendance at this convention will break all previous records. A cordial invitation to attend the sessions and to exhibit in the show is extended by the farm bureau to every potato grower.

League Plant Established 1923

The Dairymen's League plant was established here in 1923, although the actual receiving of milk was not begun until the following spring, 1924. D. L. Sherwood came here as plant superintendent the following October and has been in charge of the local plant continuously ever since.

A total of 106 producers are served at the local League plant. This contrasts with 50 in 1924.

Milk from the Addison plant is shipped from here to Horseheads where it is manufactured into fluid cream, condensed milk, storage cream, etc.

Assistants at the local plant are Carl Merrell and Lester Perkins. Herbert Seeley is director of the Dairymen's League in this district and Edgar Thompson is president of Addison local.

How What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Apples at the Wayside

Mrs. A. L. R. writes: I have a roadside market at which I sell fruits and vegetables during the summer and fail. I am planning to plant some more apple trees next spring, and shall expect to market the fruit at my stand. What varieties of apples should I plant?"

Professor L. H. MacDaniels of the department of pomology answers: "For roadside stands, it is well to grow varieties which will follow one another right through the apple season, from late July until November.

"One might begin the season with the early apple, Yellow Transparent. After this, might come the following varieties, which are listed in the order of their ripening in New York state: Early McIntosh, Red Astrachan, Gravenstein, Wealthy, Fameuse, McIntosh, Cortland, Delicious, Rhode Island Greening, Baldwin, Northern Spy, and Golden Delicious. The seasons of some of these varieties may overlap.

"In making your selections of varieties, you should plan to make your largest plantings of the standard commercial varieties, which include Wealthy, McIntosh, Cortland, Rhode Island Greenings, Baldwin and Northern Spy. The other so-called odd varieties should be used only to fill out the season. No more of them should be grown than can be disposed of at the stand or locally."

J. J. S. Writes: "Will a pullet with a high egg record in her first year repeat this record in succeeding years?"

Dr. G. O. Hall of the poultry department replies: "No. On the average, one can expect a fifteen to twenty per cent decrease in egg production each succeeding year.

At the New York state college of agriculture we trapnest our birds as long as they live. The annual production of 1867 birds for which we have complete records for three years, for all birds, was 168.8 eggs during the first year; 145.8 eggs during the second year, and 124.4 eggs for the third year. This is approximately a thirteen per cent decrease annually.

"If a pullet lays 250 eggs during her first year and we assume a twenty per cent decrease, which is very close to the average of a large number of flocks, we would expect this pullet to produce 200 eggs during her second year. It would be an economically sound practice to keep such a bird for commercial egg production through her second and third years and for breeding purposes even longer."

J. W. Russ Carries Complete Parts Service For Cars and Busses

A completely stocked auto parts and accessories store for all cars, trucks and busses is maintained by John W. Russ. The store was established in June 1932. Mr. Russ also serves as local distributor for Goodyear tires, Gould and Edison batteries.

Previous to the World War, Mr. Russ held an office position with the Ingersoll Rand Co. He then served in the war with the Headquarters Co. 304th Field Artillery, 77th division. Following the war, he was employed for twelve years by the Genreal Motors Corporation at Pontiac Michigan. He then came to Corning where he worked for his borther, Max. L. Russ for a year or so and then started his store here.

Mr. Russ is adjutant of Williams-Greengrass Post, No. 730, American Legion and is a member of the local Masonic Lodge.

Associated with him in the parts and accessories business is his brother Clinton D. Russ, a skilled mechanic, who obtained his early training with the late A. B. Chatfield.

Herbert Upham and Charles Bonham were in Elkland Saturday.

Dairy Convention To Attract Large Attendance

Keen interest is being shown by Steuben County Dairymen in the first annual convention which is being organized by the farm bureau. This meeting will be held February 1 in one of the dairy sections of the county.

An important item of the program is a discussion of the diseases of dairy cattle by an eminent veterinarian. A detailed report of the feeding experiments that have been carried on at the college of agriculture, will be presented by E. H. Harrison, the man who has had this work in charge. The outlook for the dairy industry and the marketing of milk will be handled by Prof. E. L. Cunningham.

The place where this meeting will be held and other announcements in regard to the session, will be made next week.

Main Street Station in Charge of Dom Doddato

What is now the Main Street Schell Station was originally opened in 1926 by A. Sisto, then distributor for Metro gas. In 1923 the station was purchased by the Schell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc., and Fred Doddato was placed in charge. By 1930, business had increased to such an extent that it became necessary to erect a new building.

The station is now in charge of Don Daddato, who succeeded his brother, Fred, about three years ago. The station is conveniently situated on Main Street and enjoys a large patronage.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates Cornell
(Copyright, 1932)

The Story Teller's Farewell

The silver moon rose clear and cold that eventide and the full meaning of the final message of the old story teller pierced the hearts of all her hearers around the hearth log. Silence greeted her final words, "Have faith", and the little children kissed her hand and quietly ran off to their bunk-like beds into the sides of their bark covered homes.

Deep silence reigned throughout the village. Now and then the old gray wolf of yonder hill would raise his mournful wail to the crescent moon.

After a restless night for both children and parents, the pink of morning crept over the eastern hill. A hasty breakfast of hot succotash was followed by the gathering of all the clans around the council ring in the center of the village.

Although council fire smoke was customary only at twilight, it was re-kindled on this morning and the opening chant of farewell to the story-teller echoed in the nearby hills, for the whole village joined in the chorus.

Then the keepers of the faith escorted the story teller to the council center and each man, woman and child brought forward a pinch of sacred tobacco and placed it in the long leather pouch of the story teller. Finally came the oldest grandmother, who took some tobacco from the pouch and threw it upon the fire.

As the blue smoke curled aloft, the hearts, the eyes, and the hands of the people went skyward, calling on the Great Spirit to watch and guide the story teller as she journeyed to the distant village to begin anew her teaching.

The crouched figure on the hillside grew even smaller. When she reached the brow of the hill, the story teller turned quickly, raised her hands in a final farewell, and disappeared over the hill forever.

Tears came to the eyes of the little children, but in their hearts the stories lived on, and long moons after their children's children repeat her tales in the happy homes of the six thousand Iroquois still living in the Promised Land of old New York.

Herrington and Shumway are located on Colwell street near the former Park, Winton and True plant. They do excellent auto repairing and general automobile service.

The firm was organized about three months ago. Forrest Herrington and Rush Shumway are the partners. Both are experienced automobile men.

Farmers Make Extensive Use of Farm Bureau

Some interesting figures are printed in the annual report of the Steuben County Farm Bureau recently compiled.

During 1933 there were 2608 calls. 8266 farmers attended the 111 meetings held by the farm bureau during 1933. Personal letters to the number of 3376 and 154 circular letters had a distribution of 26,036 copies.

In an effort to help farmers cope with financial problems, the farm bureau office served as headquarters for the crop and the Federal Land Bank loans and office calls on these matters approximated 650. As a result of loans obtained many farmers have readjusted their debts on a long time basis, were able to purchase seed and fertilizer last spring, and to satisfy creditors who were pressing for payment.

Among other things the farm bureau operates a labor bureau. This service has been used by 206 men seeking employment and farmers in need of help.

"The demands made upon the farm bureau in 1933 exceed that of any previous year", president Murray Barnes states. "Emergency work has been carried out without extra help and the regular program which includes service to every branch of Steuben's agriculture has been carried on without any restriction. This has been possible because of the loyal support of the officers and the membership throughout the year. We are looking forward to a year of even larger service in 1934."

Whitmore Store First Established in 1880

K. E. Whitmore, who came here from Farley, Iowa, and opened a hardware store in the year 1880, was the father of Frank Whitmore, Addison hardware dealer of today.

The elder Whitmore who opened his new hardware in the former John R. Vose building on the east sid of Main Street, sold out after a few years to Amos Roberts of Addison, who in turn sold out to J. H. Roberts of Rochester.

J. H. Roberts operated the store for nine years and during all of this period Frank Whitmore served as a clerk.

Then in 1909, Whitmore asd Stewart, the "Whitmore" being Frank, bought out the stock. In 1917 Mr. Whitmore puchased Mr. Stewarts interest and has since conducted the business.

In August 1921 a new and comodious store was built on the site of the burned-down Baldwin block. Mr. Whitmore moved into this storein March 1927.

The Whitmore hardware caries a complete line of hardware, plumbing and the Massey-Harris line of farm implements.

Red Cross Formulates Financial Policy

The monthly Red Cross meeting was held Tuesday evening, December 26, at the office of the town clerk. The chief topic of discussion was concerning the financial policy of the Addison branch. Two plans are suggested in the manual for Chapters of the American National Red Cross. The two plans are as follows:

(a) All funds raised in the name of the American National Red Cross by branches or individuals are deposited in the chapter treasury. The chapter executive committee is then responsible for the support of Red Cross activities in the entire chapter territory.

(b) The branch keeps funds raised locally in its own treasury, subject to regular payment of its part of the expenses of all Red Cross activities in the chapter territory, the amount of such payment to be determined on a quota basis by the chapter evecutive committee.

In view of the fact that Corning Chapter supplied a generous quantity of goods last year, and has, by estimate, since last September, furnished goods to the amount of $150 to Addison, it was voted to adopt plan "a" for this year's membership canvass. The surplus from previous years and special gifts for local welfare work are retained in our own treasury for local purchases in accordance with plan "b".

Dazed and bleeding, Wilbur Uner of a Kansas prison outbreak, was taken by officers of the law. He was captured in a small furniture store where he had sought protection from police. Twice he had been surrounded and shot his way free, but when finally located in the store Underhill offered no resistance. He was known as the "Lone Wolf" and the "Tri-state Terror", having been a pal of Bailey who recently was sent up for life.

Hearty and sincere congratulations to you and the Addison Advertiser on the occasion of reaching its 75th birthday.

The issue of December 28th setting forth progress that Addison has made since its newspaper first came into being, is indeed a creditable one, and the citizens of your city have every reason to be proud of their representative in the newspaper field.

Very truly yours,
George F. Weston,
Industrial Commissioner
Erie Railroad Cd.

Funeral of Mrs. Strickland

Ames Street Resident Suffered Stroke on December 13th—Born at Wellsville—Daugther and Brother Survive

The funeral of Mrs. Jane Strickland, who died on December 22nd, was held at her late home on Ames Street Sunday afternoon, December 24th, Rev. Ralph Webb, pastor of the Addison Methodist Episcopal Church, officiating. Bearers were D. H. Orr, Harry Sanford, Samuel C. Erwin, S. M. LaGrange, Harry Rial and Frank Shumway. Interment took place in the Rural Cemetery.

Mrs. Strickland was born at Wellsville, N. Y., October 28th, 1852, a daughter of Daniel and Mary Fanton. When about twenty years of age she was married to Edward Strickland. Two children were born to them; a son Frank, now deceased, and a daughter Lydia, who has resided at home.

Nearly all of Mrs. Strickland's life was spent in Addison and she was well known and highly respected by all citizens of the community. She was a devoted mother, a kindly neighbor and throughout her residence here had been a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. She had been in failing health for the past three years and suffered a stroke on December 13th from which she never rallied.

Besides her daughter, Lydia, Mrs. Strickland is survived by a brother Andrew Fanton, also of Addison.

Star Popular Movie House

New Manager, Walter A. Smith, Books Leading Attractions— Active in Entertainment Field for Nearly Thirty Years.

Alterations recently completed by Walter A. Smith, new proprietor and manager of the Star Theatre, Addison, have made this old established amusement house into one of the most attractive and popular playhouses along the Southern Tier.

The Star was taken over by Mr. Smith early in November, just past. It was temporarily closed while alterations were being effected. New and comfortable seats were installed. Both interior and exterior were artistically redecorated in the modernistic vein. Lighting fixtures conforming in style and type to the newer motif replaced the previous equipment.

Mr. Smith's long experience in the theatre business has given him entree to the booking offices of the great national producers with the result that the very latest, and highest type of pictures are now offered to Addison theatre-goers, even before they are shown in many larger communities. Included among the offerings now being shown at the Star from week to week are productions of RKO, United Artists, Warner Bros., First National, Columbia and Universal.

The new owner of the Star has devoted practically his entire business life to the theatre. Born in Corning forty-four years ago, he lived there until nine years of age, when with his family he moved to Hornell. He graduated from Hornell High School, but even previous to this his career in the theatre field had been started. As far back as 1906, while yet a mere youth, he had attained to a post as treasurer of the Shattuck Opera House. He continued in this capacity until 1910, the late Charles Bird, well-known in the amusement field, being head of the theatre corporation at that time. During 1910-11-12, he was in Pottsville, Pa., where he managed the Academy of Music, at that time one of the leading playhouses in the state of Pennsylvania and widely known as a try-out house for New York attractions.

In 1912-13, Mr. Smith managed "The Wolf Show", a road show of the dramatic type. Frances Starr was the leading lady in that production. Late in 1913 he went to Oil City, Pa., where for a period of about one year he managed three houses, the Oil City Opera House, the Lyric and the Majestic. Entering the specialized production field, he next managed the road tours of the magician, Harry Blackstone, touring New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and the New England States.

By this time the World War was on and America had entered the conflict, leaving the road show at Portland, Me., Mr. Smith enlisted in the service of Uncle Sam and was assigned to manage amusements and entertainments at two southern camps, namely, Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., and Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga. From late in 1918 to the year 1926 he was with the Schine Theatres, stationed at Lockport, Medina, Corning, Oneonta and Cooperstown.

In 1926 and 1927 the lure of the road brought him to the Shubert organization as manager of "Little Boy Blue". The years 1929 and 1930 found him again with Schines. In 1931 he managed Schine's theatre in Corning, a position he retained at the same theatre after it passed into the hands of the Fox organization in 1932. He continued as manager there until July 1933 shortly before coming to the Star here in Addison.

On December 13, New York state farm buheau memberships for 1934 totaled 22fi513.
